Documents to bring to your driving theory test

From 1st October 2007 you'll be expected to show both parts of your valid driving licence (the photocard and the paper counterpart) at the test centre (Failure to bring both parts will result in you being unable to take your theory test and you will lose your fee for that test). If you have an old-style licence without a photo you must also bring a valid passport. You might like to bring along your letter of appointment as it will have your booking reference number on it.
